"Don't let them call You SKINNY"

... advises Hollywood's Brightest New Star
JUNE WILKINSON,

Co-starring in "THE CONTINENTAL TWIST"
STARRING LOUIS PRIMA

"Making any movie is hard work but 'THE CONTINENTAL TWIST' was truly exhaustingly strenuous. We started early and worked late . . . ate at all hours or not at all. To help keep from losing weight and to build up my energy and strength, I often used SUPER WATE-ON as a meal time supplement and during breaks I would eat WATE-ON Tablets, too. Both forms of WATE-ON are super-concentrated with weight building calories, vitamins, minerals, quick energy elements and other body building nutrients. Yes, WATE-ON helps maintain the figure without overeating. So, girls, don't be thin and underweight because of poor appetite or poor eating habits. Ask your doctor . . . if he approves, try WATE-ON. Perhaps the boys won't be calling 'Hey, Skinny' at you anymore."

TWO OF A KIND

"BUT we aren't at all alike," Sally said impatiently. She was speaking to her friend Dot who sat opposite her in the noisy restaurant. It was during lunch hour and the clatter of dishes made conversation difficult. Sally was about to repeat her statement, but Dot stopped her by picking up where Sally left off.

"How can you say a thing like that?" she protested. "Furthermore, you haven't even met the guy."

"I don't have to," Sally said with emphasis. "It figures that a research chemist and little old me wouldn't have much in common. I wouldn't know what to say to him! I wouldn't even know what to talk about or where to begin. I'd just be lost all evening, that's for sure."

She stopped to catch her breath, and poked listlessly at the chicken salad before her. She was on a spot and she knew it. After all, Dot was her best friend, and it wasn't often that she asked a favor. If she was any kind of a sport, she knew she should accept the blind date and make the best of matters. Was it Dot's fault if her boy friend's cousin came into town unexpectedly? Something had to be provided in the way of entertainment, and that was how the idea for the double date originated. Naturally, she, Sally, was the most likely candidate. It was only a matter of her saying "yes" and then everything would be settled.

"How about it?" Dot pleaded. "Be a darling and say you'll do it . . . just this once . . ."

Sally squirmed, but there was no avoiding Dot's brown, pleading eyes. "I think the whole thing is absolutely silly," she began. "It's not myself I'm thinking of, I mean that. It's just . . ." She paused, there was no use going on, not with Dot becoming more mournful by the second. "All right," she said, her voice filled with resignation. "It's a date."

"I'll be back in a minute," Dot yelled, already half way across the room. "I have to call Bob and let him know. He'll get in touch with his cousin and fill him in on the details."

Sally would have liked calling Dot back, but she knew she couldn't, not anymore. She pushed away the chicken salad, and stared across the crowded room. How did she ever get caught up in such matters? she wondered.

For the remainder of the day she went about her duties at the office with little enthusiasm. There was a time, she remembered, when she once went out with a soil specialist from the agricultural college. The conversation gravitated around crop rotation, irrigation and the relative merits of dairy farming as opposed to truck farming. The horrible part of it, was that she was unable to offer any sensible opinion on any of these subjects, so she sat for most of the evening like a bump on a log, merely saying yes or no, and hoping she was saying it at the right time.

When the door chimes sounded that evening, Sally was putting the last touches of make-up to her lips. She heard her mother at the door, greeting her friends, and a second later she was calling up to her.

"Be right down," Sally shouted, tossing the facial tissue into the waste basket beneath her vanity. She gave a last glance in the mirror, approved at what she saw, and then flicking off the light hurried down.

Bob and Dot were waiting for her at the landing, and just behind them stood a tall young man.

"And you must be George, Bob's cousin," said Sally smiling.

"That's right," Bob said. "George is a research chemist," he added as a kind of reminder.

"I know," said Sally, making the supreme effort to keep the smile from fading. "It must be interesting work," and she smiled all the harder in George's direction.

"I like it," said George simply, and then lapsed into silence.

Dot came to the rescue by glancing at her watch and letting out a cry. "We'll have to hurry," she chirped. "We've only got fifteen minutes to make the dance."

Sally and George sat in the back seat, and as they drove along the smooth ribbon of highway, little was said. From time to time, Sally would steal a glance in George's direction. He had a nice profile, with the kind of firm jaw Sally admired in a man. His hair was nice too. A good clean brown in color, and wavy without losing its masculine touch. She racked her brain trying to think of something appropriate to say, something that would interest her escort. She tried thinking back to her high school chemistry, and she remembered an experiment that combined zinc with sulphuric acid. The reason for combining them escaped her.

Did the combination produce hydrogen, she wondered, or was it something else? She was on the point of asking George, but stopped herself. How silly can one get, she scolded herself. She would have to try a different tack entirely.

"Does your work have anything to do with atomic energy?" she ventured timidly.

He grinned, a warm, friendly one. "Most people think all research chemists are connected with the atomic program, but it's not so. Chemistry today embraces almost all fields. In my case I happen to work in plastics."

"Oh," said Sally. She felt embarrassed. Now he thinks I'm as silly as all those other people, she thought glumly to herself. She looked up, and his eyes were smiling into hers. It gave her courage and she began again, a bit more hopefully.

"Then your firm must make a lot of those wonderful toys you see these days."

His laugh was spontaneous, and in a rich baritone.

"That's what most people think about plastics. It's true that a lot of it is used in toys, but my firm specializes in plastics for industrial purposes. You can't imagine how tough that stuff really is."

"I don't suppose I could," murmured Sally. It was getting worse by the minute. Everything she dreaded was coming true. It was pointless from the very start, and how she tried to make Dot see it. She and George were just not the same kind. They were as far apart as the North and South poles. She would make one more attempt, and then . . .

She glanced his way, started to say something, but then his hand was on hers. His friendly smile beamed her way.

"Let's not talk shop," he said. "Let's talk about you. George tells me that you like square dancing, and swimming and hiking too. In a way you're a lot like me. I haven't done much square dancing, but swimming and hiking are two of my favorite sports."

"They are?" exclaimed Sally. "Why I never thought you'd have the time for such things, or the . . ." She paused with embarrassment.

"Or the interest?" he concluded.

She nodded her head in the affirmative, and then a moment later Bob had turned off the road and they were slowing down behind the other parked cars.

To one side the colored lights had been strung from the trees, and the sound of music floated their way. Some couples were already out on the floor and they swung and moved about as the piping cries of the caller urged them along at a faster pace, his voice rising and falling in sing-song tones.

It was strange, Sally thought to herself, as she and the others began walking toward the music. Especially his having said they were alike, and in so many ways too! The music grew louder, and then his hand found hers.

"I'll probably be pretty awkward at the beginning," he said, "but I should catch on rather quick . . . especially with such a good teacher."

In another moment, they were on the floor, whirling to the frisky tune. There was little that Sally had to show him in the way of steps. In a matter of minutes he had caught the rhythm perfectly, and their laughter rang clear and loud above the fiddles.

When they paused for some cool lemonade, the pressure of his hand on hers tightened. "How about a hike next week?" he asked.

"I'd love it," Sally replied.

As they walked back to the floor, hand in hand, Sally couldn't help thinking how wonderful everything was. They really were alike, she mused. And the more she thought of it, the more wonderful she felt.

COMPLETE 4 PIECE MATCHED SET OF LUGGAGE

Unbelievably ONLY $29.98 Priced at

Yes, that price is correct . . . Only $2.98 for the complete 4 piece set. Not $2.98 each, but $2.98 complete for all 4 pieces. And, there is nothing else to buy . . . no extra, no additions. Its modern appearance and wide-stitched simulated leatherette material will amaze you with its good looks.

IMPORTED AND MASS PRODUCED TO MAKE THIS PRICE POSSIBLE

This tremendous bargain is possible only through the use of pressed chip-board. This wonderfully versatile material bends around three sides and is bonded by sturdy wide stitching to the overlapping closing. Snap locks and handles are riveted in place. The big one has extra metal stripping for strength and long wear. Inside has laminated modern design print. Each piece fits inside the next larger which saves your storage space and makes our shipping easier.

NOT FANCY LUGGAGE — BUT USEFUL, PRACTICAL

You will be thrilled and delighted with the many, many uses you will find for this set. It will make a marvelous gift and your thoughtfulness will be appreciated for such a long time. Lightweight. It avoids the silly situation where the luggage weighs more than the clothing carried. When this offer was first made to us by the overseas company we couldn't believe our ears, but we were delighted when we saw it just a few days ago—and you will be too. Each piece serves a specific purpose such as vanity and cosmetic case (8"), personal Valet (10"), overnight case (12") or family size (14").

Remember, the complete price for all 4 matched pieces of luggage is only $2.98. Because of its size, we are forced to ask for an additional 63¢ shipping charge. Note: Due to the Federal Law, there is a 10% excise tax on all purchases of luggage. This Federal tax (30¢ in this instance) is turned over directly by us to the Government. We merely act as agents and in no way, benefit. Kindly add this 30¢ to your purchase price when ordering.
